The Classification Predict

Your challenge is building a Machine Learning model that is able to classify, from their tweets whether or not a person believes in climate change. There will be four main categories a tweet can fall under.

There are four distinct Class labels present in the train data. Hence the the problem is a multi-class classification problem.

Label	Sentiments	Description
2	News:	the tweet link to factual news about climate change
1	Pro:	the tweet supports the belief of man-made climate change
0	Neutral:	the tweet neither supports nor refutes the belief of man-made climate change
-1	Anti:	the tweet does not believe in man-made climate change

Multi-dimensional Classification

In a multi-dimensional classification problem, the goal is to classify data points into more than two categories based on multiple features or dimensions. Each dimension represents a different attribute or characteristic of the data point.

For example, in a dataset of images of fruits, a multi-dimensional classification problem could involve classifying each image based on multiple features such as color, shape, size, texture, and so on. The goal of the classification task might be to identify whether the image contains an apple, a banana, or an orange based on these features.

Observations:

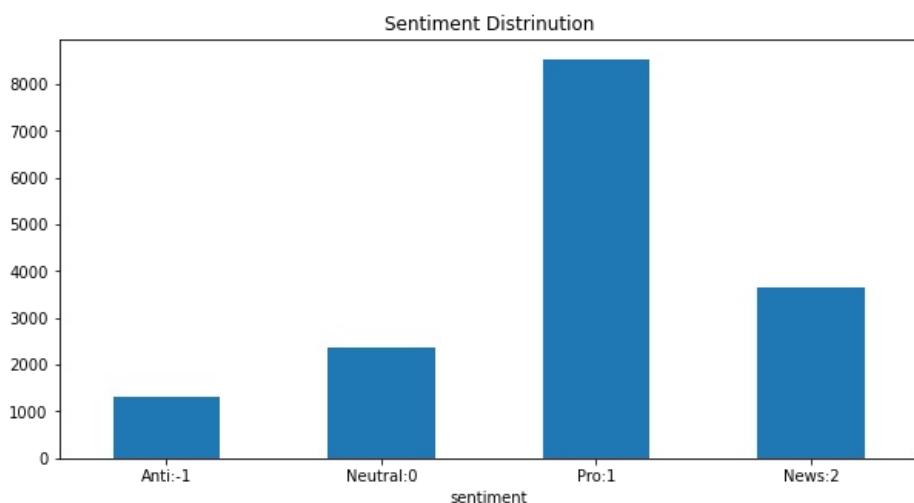

The train dataset contains three columns; one categorical - 'message' and two numerical - 'sentiment' and 'tweetid'. Some tweets contain names of organisations, continents and countries.

In [10]: #Drop the 'tweetid' feature df = df.drop(['tweetid'], axis = 1)

Tweet sentiment Analysis

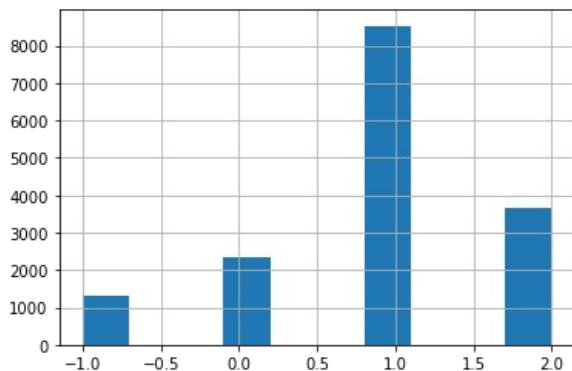

-Visualization of the target variable

In [11]: # Plotting the distribution for dataset.
ax = df.groupby('sentiment').count().plot(kind='bar', title='Sentiment Distribution', legend=False, figsize =(10,5)) ax.set_xticklabels(['Anti:-1', 'Neutral:0', 'Pro:1', 'News:2'], rotation=0) # Storing data in lists.
sentiment = list(df['sentiment'])

```
In [12]: df.sentiment.hist()
```

Out[12]: <AxesSubplot:>

Observations:

- The sum of the tweets relating to news, neutral and anti is less than half of the total tweets.
- The distribution indicates that there is a class imbalance in the train dataset. The effect of this imbalance, if not attended to, is a model which performs very well at categorising samples of a particular category and fails at others. For an instance, a model built on this train data will perform well in categorising tweets which supports man-made climate change (Pro) but performs way lesser at classifying the Anti tweets.
- The training dataset is skewed to the Pro sentiment category indicating a strong support for the belief of man-made climate change.

Tokenization, Lemmatization and Stopwords

-When tokenizing is the process of splitting our input data into a sequence of meaningful/understandable parts of the data that can be worked through.

-Lemmatization is a text pre-processing technique used to break down words into their root meanings.

-And we will also be removing stop words which are a set of commonly used words in any language, here we will be using english stop words.

In [26]: tokenizer = nltk.RegexpTokenizer(r"\w+") from nltk.stem import WordNetLemmatizer lemmatizer = WordNetLemmatizer() from nltk.corpus import stopwords stopwords = stopwords.words('english')
```

```
In [27]: def message_to_token_list(s): tokens = tokenizer.tokenize(s) lower_cased_tokens = [t.lower() for t in tokens]
```

```

    lemmatized_tokens = [lemmatizer.lemmatize(t) for t in lower_cased_tokens] useful_tokens = [t for t in lemmatized_tokens if t not in stopwords] return useful_tokens

Also apply everything to the test data as well

In [30]:

df_test['message'] = df_test['message'].apply(clean_text) df_test['message'] = df_test['message'].apply(message_to_token_list) df_test['message'] = df_test['message'].apply(lambda x: " ".join(x))

VECTORIZATION

Vectorization in classification refers to the representation of textual or categorical data as numerical vectors. This is necessary because most classification algorithms cannot process raw data in its original form. Instead, the data must be transformed into a numerical format. Vectorization can be achieved using techniques like one-hot encoding, bag of words, and word embeddings. This process allows algorithms to learn patterns in the data and make predictions about new examples.

Transforming the Dataset Using TF-IDF Vectorizer

In [31]:

#Function to vectorise our data
from sklearn.feature_extraction.text import TfidfVectorizer def vectorize_data(train, test):

    vectorizer = TfidfVectorizer(ngram_range=(1,2), max_features=50000) train_data = vectorizer.fit_transform(train) test_data = vectorizer.transform(test) return train_data, test_data, vectorizer

```

In [32]:

train_data, test_data, vectorizer = vectorize_data(df['message'], df_test['message']) feature_names = vectorizer.get_feature_names_out() for name in feature_names:
    print(name)

Model Evaluation

-Here we will be evaluating our different models to see which one will be the best one for our predict.

-We will first create a function that will apply evaluation measures to check for model performance,

In [39]: # Function for classification report
def Evaluate_model(model):
    # Predict values for Test dataset
    y_pred = model.predict(X_test)
    # Print the evaluation metrics for the dataset.
    print(classification_report(y_test, y_pred))
    # Compute and plot the Confusion matrix
    cf_matrix = confusion_matrix(y_test, y_pred) categories = ['Anti', 'Neutral', 'Pro', 'News'] group_names = ['True Neg', 'False Pos', 'False Neg', 'True Pos'] group_percentages = ['{:0.2%}'.format(value) for value in cf_matrix.flatten() / np.sum(cf_matrix)] labels = [f'{v1}{v2}' for v1, v2 in zip(group_names, group_percentages)] labels = np.asarray(labels).reshape(2,2) sns.heatmap(cf_matrix, annot = True, cmap = 'Greens', fmt = '', xticklabels = categories, yticklabels = categories, linewidths = 0.5) plt.xlabel("Predicted values", fontdict = {'size':14}, labelpad = 10) plt.ylabel("Actual values", fontdict = {'size':14}, labelpad = 10)
    plt.title ("Confusion Matrix", fontdict = {'size':10}, pad = 5)

LinearSVC(Linear Support Vector Classifier) Model

- The LinearSVC classifier's objective is to fit the provided data, to return a 'best fit' hyperplane, that divides or categorizes our data. Therefore we can use the classifier to see the predicted class.

In [40]:
```

```
lr_svc = LinearSVC()
lr_svc.fit(X_train, y_train)
y_pred = lr_svc.predict(X_test)

Logistic Regression Model

-A statistical method used for building machine learning models, where the dependent variable is binary.

-It is used to describe the data and the relationship between one dependent variable and one or more independent variables.

In [42]: lr_model = LogisticRegression() lr_model.fit(X_train, y_train)
lr_pred = lr_model.predict(X_test)
Evaluate_model(lr_model)

Random Forest Model

-It is supervised Machine learning algorithm, widely used on Classification and Regression problems. -It builds decision trees on different samples and takes their majority vote for a classification problem, and then takes average on case of a regression problem.

In [44]: tree_model = RandomForestClassifier(max_depth=50, n_estimators=50, max_features=5) tree_model.fit(X_train, y_train) predictions = tree_model.predict(X_test)

The chosen model

-from the model evaluations above I have decided to choose the Linear Support Vector Classification model.

-I chose the model as it has high predictive accuracy than the other models, it also has a higher F1 test score than the other models, it has a decent training time as well which makes it a good model for our predictions.
